

Chronology of Tibetans Sentenced in Tibet 2016

1. Feb 22, 2016<sup>1</sup>

Shokjang aka Druklo, a prominent Tibetan writer, was sentenced to three years in prison on Wednesday, 17 February. The sentence was pronounced by the Peoples' Intermediate Court in Rebgong (in Chinese, Tongren) of Malho (Huangnan) prefecture in Qinghai province.

Shokjang was accused of writing material the Chinese government said could incite discord among nationalities and maintaining secret contact with so-called splittists who want to separate Tibet from China, and causing instability in the community.

2. Feb 22, 2016<sup>2</sup>

Gomar Choephel, 47, was sentenced on Feb. 17 by the People's Intermediate Court in the Malho (in Chinese, Huangnan) Tibetan Autonomous Prefecture in northwestern China's Qinghai province in accused of passing a photo of exiled spiritual leader the Dalai Lama to friends via social media.

3. April 11, 2016<sup>3</sup>

Rinchen Dorje, Kurde Yeshe and Phurko received two-year jail terms, while Jigje Kyab was given a three-year term, for their part in the attempt to take the land back from the government.

None of the Tibetans will have to serve out their entire sentence in prison, however, as an unusual sentencing arrangement allowed them to serve their terms on parole, as long as they agreed to serve an additional six months.

The four were part of a group of Tibetans who had briefly reoccupied confiscated community land in Thangkor town in Dzoerge (in Chinese, Ruo'ergai) county in the Ngaba (Aba) Tibetan and Qiang Autonomous Prefecture.

4. May 9, 2016<sup>4</sup>

Lobsang Jamyang (Pen-name: Lomik), a prolific and courageous writer who is also a monk from the local Kirti Monastery was sentenced on charges of "leaking state secrets" and "engaging in separatist activities" at a closed-door trial held at Lunggu (Ch: Wenchuan) County in Ngaba (Ch: Aba) Tibetan and Qiang Autonomous Prefecture, Sichuan Province. His family members were not informed about the trial and were not provided any details on the exact date of his sentencing.

Jampal Gyatso, 22, a Tibetan monk was sentenced by authorities in southwestern China's Sichuan province for three years in prison in a secret trial for staging a solitary protest in Ngaba county, with no opportunity given to his parents or other relatives to attend the hearing or hire a lawyer to present his case. His family members learned about this only on Aug 1.

8. Aug 4, 2016<sup>8</sup>

Adrak, also known as Lobsang Drakpa, a Tibetan monk missing since his detention by police last year following a solo protest in southwestern China's Sichuan province has been tried and sentenced in a secret hearing. His family members were not informed, but after a long search they finally learned that he had been given a three-year sentence. He is now being held in a prison in Maowun [in Chinese, Mao] county, and his family members were not allowed to see him.

9. Sept 1, 2016<sup>9</sup>

Lobsang Kelsang, then 19, launched his protest at around 3:00 p.m. on September 7 on a central street of the main town of Sichuan's Ngaba (in Chinese, Aba) county and was quickly overpowered by police stationed nearby. He was carrying a photo of [exiled spiritual leader] His Holiness the Dalai Lama over his head and was calling out for Tibetan freedom," one source said, speaking on condition of anonymity. A Tibetan layman who attempted to interfere with the arrest was also detained, and police at one point fired gunshots into the air to disperse a forming crowd.

10. Sept 19, 2016<sup>10</sup>

Jinpa Gyatso, about 39, and Kelsang Monlam, 37, were each sentenced to one year and a half on 12 September by the Sangchu County People's Court. Both monks belonged to the college of Buddhist Dialectics at Labrang Tashikyil Monastery in Sangchu County. They were arbitrarily detained separately on 4 June 2015 and held in prolonged incommunicado detention.
